JavaScript Hoisting is mainly moving declarations to the top, which means a variable can be declared after its being used, variables like let and const are hoisted on top of the block nut not initialized.